This resource is used for extensions of Git how GitLens!
For show the modifications files and folders.

filename text colors can be used to for git lens, background color of most recent colored parent directory can be used to help user color code their folder structures into sections.

Ohh perfect, but, how set the color for a folder? Is necessary a extension/plugin?

techsin commented on Nov 9, 2018

I don't know how to set colors for folders. But I was thinking children should inherit color of parent UNLESS they were given different color then again similarly their children should go with new color.

This system is used all over Adobe programs to help users quickly navigate through layers.
Programs like Ai, After Affects, etc.

Work around I found in the meantime.

            "folders": [
                    {
                            "name": "⚙⚙⚙⚙ ROOT",
                            "path": "...snip..."
                    {
                            "name": "🗁🗁🗁🗁 SOURCES",
                    {
                            "name": "CHALLENGES",
                            "path": "...snip..."
                    {
                            "name": "📘📘📘📘 STORYBOOK",
                            "path": "...snip..."
            ],
